Not illustrated. 1913 Excerpt: .during the night, that the sun had just risen and the unmarred beauty of the morning made it seem as though the weather gods were observing the day of our departure. One of our friends who is an artist remarked: How well your cameras have reproduced the many moods of whimsical nature! Our guests were all glad that our Kodaks had not been left behind when we took our vacation trips. Hogging the reader s kind indulgence for the above prelude, I will proceed to explain, as fully as possible, how our slides were made. Last fall, as we had a whole winter before us and enough money in the treasury, we decided to try lantern-slide making; we also decided that we would not purchase a lantern until we were certain we could make slides. Ralph was appointed to look up data on making slides, and to bring home with him the necessary materials according to our good dealer s recommendations. Inasmuch as we knew nothing, at this stage of the game, about making reductions, we turned our attention to contact printing. Of course, we were all anxious to see how our pictures looked on the slides, but to sister we always give the honor of being first. Her negatives, being 234x3/4, adapted themselves very nicely and allowed us to print the whole picture on the slide. My negatives, being 1-x2, also worked in without any loss. The evening we began our operations we made twelve...
