Not illustrated. 1901 Excerpt: .point, of other departments of the grammar, similar phenomena are found. The explanation is that these words were actually chosen as examples by the earliest teachers. Later generations, further removed from the living language, found some reason for disagreeing with them; but, as usual, did not venture to deny the dicta of the ancients. Since the old doctrines were not expressed in abstract rules, but in typical examples, it was open to the new school to treat the examples as exceptions, and so to embalm them in the pointing. If this be so, the exceptions embody an earlier tradition than the rules, and bring us nearer to the living pronunciation. But of course there may also be cases for which other reasons must be found. CRITICISM OF PSALM CXIX. Br Rev. J. E. H. Thomson, D.D. As this Psalm is not attributed to any author we...
